FIRE PREVENTION ESSAYISTS BOW TO BOY OF THIRTEEN

During the month of October, Fire Prevention week was observed. The children of the Jefferson school district entered a contest for a composition on fire prevention.

Junior Doyle, 13-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Doyle, of Risel street, won the coveted cup, which was awarded as the prize for winning the essay contest by the Fire Department of Daly City.

The committee that judged the merit of the compositions submitted, has issued the following statement:

All of the compositions on "Fire Prevention" submitted to this bureau for its opinion as to the best one, are very good, and each one deserves a great deal of praise.

Disregarding rhetorical and grammatical construction, we chose, however, the composition written by Junior Doyle of the Crocker school as the best one for the following reasons:

(a) He has mentioned more direct causes of fire than any other competitor.

(b) He has stated the probable effects of such fires, and he has described the methods of preventing them.

The thought that the object of teaching "Fire Prevention" in schools is to acquaint the children with those causes of fire with which they come in direct and intimate contact in their daily lives has influenced our decision.

The composition submitted by the winner, Junior Doyle, follows:

Human carelessness has caused more serious and damaging fires than Nature restored in thousands of years.

By this I mean large forest fires caused by careless campers. Thousands of acres of trees have been destroyed by forest fires.

Cigarettes carelessly thrown out of automobiles have been the cause of many fires.

A large number of fires have been caused by defective wiring, especially in old buildings and homes. Property owners should have their wiring inspected regularly and the flues kept clean.

Other causes of fire are over-heated stoves and heating plants, and allowing rubbish to accumulate, especially around a furnace.

Children with matches have been the cause of many fires. Matches should be kept out of the reach of small children.

Cleaning clothes with explosives has injured and killed many people and as a rule burning down the property.

Another means of causing fires are stoves too near the wall and too close to curtains and drapes. Do not ever store gasoline in your basement, for it will most likely blow up the house and kill the occupants in it.

A person may leave the flat-iron on and go to the phone and when you come back the house will be in a mass of flames. Another cause of fire which is gradually being abolished is fireworks.

Fireworks have certainly caused their share of fires, besides loss of life.

People that have fireplaces should be sure and have a spark screen, for this prevents fires. Also have a hand fire extinguisher installed in the kitchen and basement.

The essay that won second place was submitted by Jack Lewis, who attended school in New Mexico until August 11, 1930. His teacher is Miss M. Cantless.

The essay that won third place was submitted by Anita Mooney, of the Jefferson school, whose teacher is Miss Marie H. Traynor.

FAITHFUL FIREMEN GET CERTIFICATES

Retirement certificates were issued by the Daly City Fire Department last Saturday night in Company No. 1 fire house. Those who received certificates were David Devenzi, S. Kramer and Al Romer.

Some of these men belonged to the department when it was little more than a bucket brigade.

Mr. David Devenzi, one of the guests present, was one of the oldest members of the department.

E. Goldkuhl delivered a lecture on the history of the Daly City Fire Department. Captain Harmon also gave a short talk. Mr. Schenk was chairman.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies delicious refreshments were enjoyed by all present.

AUDITOR STACK HOLDS UP FUNDS FOR AMENDMENT

The proposed campaign in this county for passage of Amendment No. 18 on the November ballot, for which $300 was appropriated by the board of supervisors on October 20, hit a snag Wednesday when County Auditor Edward M. Stack declared that spending the taxpayers' money for such a purpose would be illegal. He said he would not approve any bills against the advertising fund of the county chamber of commerce, from which the sum was appropriated.

The amendment makes it mandatory for motorists of California to pay the personal property tax on their automobiles at the same time they pay the annual registration fee, thereby eliminating collection of the tax by the counties. The counties would be reimbursed by the state. The board authorized County Assessor Dan P. Flynn to spend $300 of the advertising fund in behalf of the measure.

Stack stated that he had warned Flynn not to spend the money, and that if he did he would not approve the claims against the advertising fund.

Flynn had planned to use the appropriation for advertisements in county newspapers and distribution of literature in favor of the amendment.

A DELIGHTFUL AFFAIR

One of the most enjoyable affairs of the season occurred on Tuesday evening, October 28, when the Royal Neighbors met at the home of Mrs. Cochrane, on Los Banos avenue. The evening was spent in playing Dutch whist. One can not help but make mention of the delightful way every guest was received by the host and hostess. Refreshments were served to the following: Mesdames Gehring, Rampey, Headvall, Romer, Appleton, Jorgensen, Hammock, Smith, Nelson, Twisten, Burdick, Rang, Jordan, Cliver, Putney, Kelly and baby, Marn Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. Cochrane and Mr. Earl Cochrane.

CHURCH TO SHOW COLORED PICTURES

"Book of the Ages" will be the topic in Grace Presbyterian church Sunday evening at the 7:45 service, when a beautiful set of stereopticon slides will be shown on the screen, illustrating what the Bible is doing today in modern life. Some of the slides are the choice collection of a lifetime, belonging to Mr. George Kanzee, philanthropist, 12 Geary street. They are 12 inches long, showing scenes in panorama. All are welcome to the service. The church is located at 1006 Hanover street.

A SURPRISE LUNCHEON

The many friends of Mrs. H. Rudolph and Mrs. M. Pechinino gathered at the home of Mrs. E. C. Boyle and gave the two honored guests a surprise luncheon. After the luncheon a game of cards was enjoyed by all those present. Both of the guests were presented with a lovely token to convey the appreciation of the members of the General Pershing P. T. A. for their efforts in making the "Jiggs Dinner" such a success.

Hold Annual Bazaar

Addie Ballue's Tent, No. 28, Daughters of Civil War Veterans, held their annual bazaar on Wednesday of last week in the San Francisco Auditorium. Daly City was well represented by the following ladies: Mrs. C. Scott, Mrs. A. Meeth, Mrs. Fred Schmidt, president of the Ladies' Aid of the M. E. Church, Mrs. M. Orr, Mrs. F. Hansen, Mrs. F. Darragh, Mrs. T. L. Jorgensen, Mrs. W. Rampe.

GEORGE A. KNEESE IS COMMENDED BY INTERESTED VOTERS OF COUNTY

Attention, Voters of San Mateo County: Our county stands second only to Los Angeles in percentage of growth during the last ten years.

That growth is certain to continue. Our development will be manufacturing, commercial and residential, necessitating a tremendous amount of street, sewer, water and lighting and sub-division work.

This makes the office of County Surveyor the most important one on the ballot of November 4th.

This importance makes necessary a most careful consideration and serious investigation as to WHETHER OR NOT IT WILL BE TO THE ADVANTAGE OF OUR TAXPAYERS TO MAKE A CHANGE. Generally speaking, it is unwise to throw out an honest, competent, experienced employee or to disrupt a well organized, smoothly working, well informed, loyal force of employees, unless it can be definitely proved that there exists dishonesty, corruption, inefficiency or rank incompetence.

We, the undersigned, responsible citizens and tax payers, give you herein our conclusions after serious investigation and careful consideration of the twelve years' service rendered to San Mateo county by its incumbent Surveyor, George A. Kneese. THE BUDGET—WHY AND WHO?

Strenuous efforts have been made to make it appear that something terrible and unholy is being "put over" through the budget, so that a few plain words in explanation are in order.

The Budget is prepared by the Supervisors, who must anticipate the expenses of EVERY DEPARTMENT of the county one year in advance so that the county may have money available by taxation to meet such expenditures.

In order to have such necessary funds the County Surveyor's office is allotted by the BOARD OF SUPERVISORS, an amount it can reasonably anticipate will be necessary to pay for work ordered by said BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.

This amount so allotted is at no time at the hands of the County Surveyor but IS AT ALL TIMES CONTROLLED BY THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS and is spent only upon such work and at such times as the Board SPECIFICALLY SIGNS.

It should be clearly understood that this budget is in the main a reserve fund available to the BOARD OF SUPERVISORS for use in such work as must be done through the channel of the County Surveyor's office, and that at no time can the County Surveyor personally make use of it WITHOUT A SPECIFIC order from the BOARD OF SUPERVISORS. Two-thirds of the Budget fixed for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1930, and ending June 30, 1931, is really a revolving fund to provide PAY ROLL only for carrying out work ORDERED BY THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS, $30,200. The greater portion of this particular pay roll item is returned to the County General Fund, the expense being borne by the various assessment districts. THE SURVEYOR DOES NOT AT ANY TIME OR IN ANY MANNER RECEIVE ANY PART OF THIS FUND.

The County Government Bill, passed by the State Legislature, specifies definitely the salary of the Surveyor, one deputy and one stenographer, as regular employees, and in addition sets a maximum to the number of other trained men necessary to do the work and fixes their maximum hourly wage.

TAKE YOUR CHOICE

From all information available it is apparent the County Surveyors, District Attorneys, Coroners, etc., (professional men) take outside work to

MERCHANTS PLAY UNDER PROTEST

The Daly City Merchants-O'Brien Sportono & Mitchell contest last Sunday was played under protest, due to the delay in starting. The game was booked for 10 o'clock on Jackson diamond, but the grounds were not open until 30 minutes after that time.

Al Sportono, O'Brien's manager, protested the game after the first ball was thrown, and Umpire Peacock ruled that it would be a practice tilt. The Poultrymen were leading 7 to 1 at the finish of the contest, but whether this victory will be allowed is doubtful.

The results in the other American division games were as follows: Olympic Florists, 26; Mission Reds, 5; Napa Soda Thirties, 6; Glen Park Merchants, 2.

The standing of the clubs follows:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Olympic Florists	3	0	1.000
Mission Reds	2	1	.667
Napa Sodas	2	1	.667
O.B. S. & M.	1	1	.500
Daly City	0	2	.000
Glen Park	0	3	.000

Daly City will oppose the Glen Park Merchants next Sunday in the fourth league game. Neither team has won a game and are tied for last place. This battle to keep out of the cellar should be plenty hot.

CITIZENS REQUEST LOCAL BUS LINE

At the meeting of the City Council last Monday night a petition was received, signed by a large number of citizens, asking the City Council to try and forward a movement for Daly City to have a Market Street Railway bus line, similar to the service the Excelsior district has. The Council instructed City Clerk B. C. Ross to forward the petition to the Market Street Railway Company, and to request information as to what steps can be taken to secure this service.

The ordinance committee introduced an ordinance prescribing additional duties of policemen and firemen.

The library committee reported that Mrs. John D. Daly, in memory of the late John D. Daly, has made a wonderful and substantial donation of new books to the library. The clerk was instructed to write Mrs. Daly a letter of thanks.

Request for a permit to install a gasoline station at Mission and East Lake avenue will be acted on at the next meeting.

BIG BANK MERGER EFFECTIVE NOV. 1

The consolidation committee named to handle all of the details incident to the merging of the Bank of Italy and the Bank of America of California, recently announced that it had virtually completed its work and that all was in readiness for actually putting the merger into effect at the close of business Saturday, November 1, the date set by the Comptroller of the Currency. The merged bank will open on the morning of Monday, November 3, under the name Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association.

The committee is composed of ranking officers of Transamerica Corporation, the holding company of both banks, and of the banks themselves. It is headed by A. P. Giannini, chairman of the advisory committee of the corporation. The other members are L. M. Giannini, president, and James A. Baicalupi, general counsel of the corporation; A. J. Mount, president of the Bank of Italy; E. J. Nolan, president, and Leon Rosquera, chairman of the board of the Bank of America; W. E. Blauer, H. R. Erkes, P. C. Hale, Orta E. Monette, Armando Pedrini and G. A. Webster, vice-presidents of the Bank of Italy; and Marco Hellmon, W. F. Morrish, C. R. Bell and R. R. Yates, vice-presidents of the Bank of America.

The merged bank, with its affiliate, a state chartered institution, which it is also planned to call the Bank of America, will have 436 branches in 239 cities. Combined resources of the two institutions will be approximately one billion three hundred and fifty million dollars.

The merger plan involved three major issues—the consolidation of the branches of both banks in the territory that they jointly occupy, the incorporation of the affiliated bank to include the branches outside and certain branches within that joint territory, and the reassignment of personnel to care for the work of both the national and the state bank. As a result of the scope and extent of the merger movement and the existence within Transamerica Corporation of a number of active subsidiaries, the consolidation committee has found it possible to accommodate all of the personnel involved. Further than that, the fact of the consolidation itself has greatly enlarged many agencies of service within the institution, creating opportunities for the bank workers that did not exist before and widening the field, proportionately, for all types of banking talent. The consolidation is to be accomplished not only without decrease of personnel, but with enlarged opportunities for the employees involved.

The operative details of property appraisals and audits incident to the merger have been attended to by a force sufficiently large to have this work virtually completed by the time that the merger is proclaimed. Field forces from the headquarters of both banks have been active among the branches for some time, putting into effect the provisions of the consolidation plan in order to insure smooth operation when the merger actually transpires.

Arnold J. Mount, president of the Bank of Italy since October 17, 1929, is to be president of the Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association. E. J. Nolan, president of the Bank of America, is to be chairman of the board. The bank will maintain administrative offices in both San Francisco and Los Angeles, the board of directors holding its monthly meeting alternately in each city. The headquarters of the state bank will be in Los Angeles and its administrative work in San Francisco will be carried on in the present head office of the Bank of Italy, which, under the merger will be the San Francisco main office of the Bank of America N. T. & S. A. While all of the changes noted herein are tentative in nature, it was announced that they fairly well represent the set-up of the Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association.

supplement their earnings in counties of the class of San Mateo. Until a county becomes large enough to require the full time of a Surveyor, or District Attorney, and rich enough to afford pay accordingly, it can ONLY secure men competent to perform the work by allowing them to do private work.

Recognizing this situation the state law allows private work under certain restrictions which amply protect public interest. Therefore, in the present state of development, whoever is elected County Surveyor, if he is a big enough man to fill the job, will do private work. He will not devote his entire time to the duties of the office, because even the maximum of county work would not warrant that. It is a certainty that whoever is elected Surveyor must hire extra help every time the Supervisors order him to do a job, because the County Government Bill allows him only one assistant and one stenographer as regular full-time employees. He must, therefore, either employ the draftsmen, transitmen, chainmen, rodmen, inspectors, etc., who are regularly employed in his private business or depend upon going into the open market to hire enough competent men to handle each temporary job. WE ARE CERTAIN THAT YOU WILL AGREE WITH US THAT THE FIRST PLAN IS THE MOST LOGICAL AND BUSINESSLIKE.

You may take your choice then between the regularly employed and competent force now working under Mr. Kneese, or the private force to be built up under the James S. James Co., or recruited from time to time from the open market.

It is our unanimous opinion that it is good business for the county to encourage its Surveyor in keeping a well trained, competent engineering force ready and equipped at all times for its service.

WHERE SHALL THE "HOUSE" BE?

An attempt has been made to make great capital of the "iniquity" of Mr. Kneese "housing" his engineering force in the Court House. We have accordingly given this situation careful attention, and find that the Supervisors allot a certain portion of the Court House to the County Surveyor, and we very much doubt that any man elected to be Surveyor would attempt to carry on with any less space than that now occupied by Mr. Kneese. Doing county and private business in separate quarters would not save the taxpayers money, but in our opinion would reduce efficiency. Practically every job performed by Mr. Kneese and his engineering force is done under the order of property owners of our county, whether it is county work, municipal work, sanitary district, street or sub-division work, and the costs are borne by the taxpayers, and EVERY DOLLAR SAVED BY CONCENTRATION, TIME SAVING OR EFFICIENCY LESSENS THE BURDEN JUST THAT MUCH. A great deal of the equipment in use in the Surveyor's office is owned by Mr. Kneese and much of the data and maps that are in daily use are his personal property, and we can see nothing to be gained by separating all work other than that strictly for the county into quarters removed from the Court House.

A MATTER OF BOOKKEEPING

Insinuations have been rather freely voiced by opponents of Mr. Kneese to the effect that the county may be paying for private work.

Such a possibility has been carefully guarded against because the State Law specifies that every statement of time and material used on county work must be sworn to by Mr. Kneese and submitted to the Auditor, who must carefully check every account.

Every job ordered by the Supervisors is carried as a separate account, and every man who works on that job must keep detailed records of time and material, and in this day and age such a separation of charges is a very simple bookkeeping detail.

That a man of the experience and standing of Mr. Kneese would allow any falsifying of records or any carelessness amounting to the same, and then commit perjury by swearing to such false or inaccurate record, or that any such false or inaccurate record could get by as competent a County Auditor's office as that conducted by Mr. Stack, is unbelievable, and the insinuation of any such condition will be keenly resented by all decent citizens.

COMPARISONS OF ENGINEERING COSTS

We believe that nearly every one of the voters of San Mateo county is having just as much difficulty in understanding the so-called "Engineering Facts" as we are, and we therefore recommend that you do as we have:

Take for granted that the five Supervisors and the thirty Councilmen in the six Cities HAVE THE INTERESTS OF THEIR CITIZENS AT HEART AND KNOW WHETHER OR NOT THEY ARE GETTING VALUE RECEIVED.

When successive City Councils reappoint an official year after year to spend for them hundreds of thousands of their tax payers' money his services must be satisfactory and reasonable.

When services are not satisfactory the employee is discharged.

George A. Kneese has been County Surveyor for twelve years; City Engineer for South San Francisco twenty years; Daly City fifteen years; San Bruno fourteen years; San Carlos five years; Hillsborough four years; Atherton four years, and Belmont two years.

IN CONCLUSION
We will summarize the results of our investigations of the conduct of the County Surveyor's office, and also our opinion of the claims of those attempting to make a change.

The office of County Surveyor is now and has been in the past conducted "With the same efficiency and economy that apply to the engineering departments of all modern organizations." Its reputation for attention to business and excellence of work is of the highest. The Supervisors of this county for the last twelve years, and the Councilmen of the six cities where Mr. Kneese has served for many years as Engineer, COULD NOT HAVE COUNTENANCED INEFFICIENCY, INCOMPETENCE OR EXCESSIVE COSTS IN THE WORK HE HAS PERFORMED FOR THEM.

The "housing" in the Court House of the Engineering force which serves the county and cities, which work comprises nearly all of the "private engineering" of Mr. Kneese, does not add to the county costs, but DOES ADD VERY GREATLY TO THE EFFICIENCY OF SERVICE.

The so-called "private" work must be allowed until this county reaches the point where it can pay a salary sufficient to attract an Engineer of the necessary caliber. Any high class engineer must supplement the present salary by doing private work, either openly or "on the side" through a partner or corporation, and this will be done no matter who has the title of Surveyor.

The implication that an "engineering monopoly" has been formed by Mr. Kneese holding the position of Engineer for six smaller towns in the county is absolutely false and unfair.

In all cases and at all times the Board of Supervisors for the county and the Councils for towns have had absolute control of all projected improvement work, the final specifications, the calling for bids and awarding the contracts.

Finally, there has been no proof shown anywhere of dishonesty, corruption, inefficiency or rank incompetence, but instead there is ample proof of a long, honorable career of constructive development.

A change in the office of County Surveyor at this time would not be to the benefit or economical advantage of San Mateo county, so we urge that you vote on November 4 for George A. Kneese (incumbent.)

PREDICT BIG VOTE FOR JUDGE JOHNSON

Judge Ellis C. Johnson is all smiles these days. There is reason for his beaming, too, as each evening when he receives reports from every section of his township it is easy to see that his likelihood of victory at the election next Tuesday has grown stronger. The position of Justice of the Peace in the First Township is a very important one and the electors are beginning to realize that they should keep the popular judge right where he has done such valiant service in the last few years.

Friends of Judge Johnson have made a thorough canvass from the county line down to the southern boundary of the township and everywhere have found the same condition—the judge is held in the highest esteem by the citizens and they are planning to roll up a good majority for him. Indications are the returns will certainly show something more than a plurality.

Interest that was manifest at the Primary Election must be renewed for the General Election to ensure the best results for tried servants of the people. Apathy on the part of the voters should not be allowed to jeopardize the returning to office of Judge Ellis C. Johnson. Turn out, men and women, and give the judge the largest vote he has ever received.

MUST REPLACE LOST REGISTRATION SLIP

California motorists who, for any reason, have lost or mislaid their certificates of registration (white slip) are advised by the Division of Motor Vehicles to make application at once for a new certificate in anticipation of the coming license renewal period.

Before the motorist may secure his 1931 license plates it will be necessary for him to have his certificate of registration, and the Division states it will be easier to secure a duplicate now than to wait until the rush of renewals has started.

Applications for duplicates may be secured at any branch office of the division, from any captain or inspector in the California highway patrol or from any office of the automobile clubs.

If it is inconvenient for the motorist to get an application blank from any of these sources he may get one by writing directly to the main division office at Sacramento.

Persons who have purchased cars during the year upon which the proper transfer has not been made are advised also to make the transfer before the renewal period as it will simplify the procedure and assist the division in the expeditious handling of the hundreds of thousands of license renewals.

The annual renewal period will start December 15. Applications may be filed by mail any time after December 1.

An instrument which resembles the microphone used in a radio broadcasting station, has been developed that will respond to the slightest noise and set off an alarm which is heard in all police stations.

Office of L. W. Allen, Attorney at Law, Hobart Building, San Francisco, Cal., October 17, 1930.
Hon. C. A. Buck, Mayor, Burlingame, California.
My Dear Mr. Buck:
I have watched with the greatest interest the progress of the present political campaign in San Mateo county, more particularly as it affects my friend, Mr. James S. James. I realize that it is for the voters of San Mateo county themselves to determine what particular candidate should be chosen to fill any particular office, and hence any gratuitous suggestion from an outsider might very properly be resented. I am not acquainted with Mr. James' opponent, the present incumbent, and hence am not in a position to discuss the relative fitness of the candidates for the office of County Surveyor, even were it proper for me to do so. Believing, however, that you and other voters will welcome additional information as to the fitness of Mr. James, it has seemed to me that I may very properly testify upon the subject.
I have known Mr. James since 1906, and from that date until the present time our association has been most intimate. For several years, we concurrently represented the same municipality, acting in our respective professional capacities. For a great number of years, during the same period of time, we represented identical private interests. For a space of five or six years, we co-operated as members of the board of directors of a national bank. Frequently we found ourselves representing conflicting interests, where, instead of coadjutors we performed became adversaries. During all these years, however, we were and have remained close personal friends. I mention these things in detail, in order that you may have a background for the conclusions which I have reached respecting Mr. James.
In the light of the experience above indicated, I have no hesitancy in saying that he is a thoroughly trained and experienced engineer; that he is, in addition, a capable and experienced executive; that every position which he has occupied during my acquaintance with him, and he has held many important trusts, has been filled to the complete satisfaction of his principals and with honor to himself. He is not only competent, but diligent, honorable and trustworthy, in the fullest sense of those terms. If he is successful in his present quest for office,

I am confident that the interests of your county, insofar as they are committed to his keeping, will be thoroughly safeguarded, and that the voters will have no occasion at any time to regret their choice.
You have my permission to use this letter, or any part of it, for such purpose as you desire, and I want to assure you of my willingness to enlarge upon the subject matter if you, or any other interested person, do desire.
Very truly yours,
L. W. ALLEN.

AMERICAN BATTLESHIPS

At present the United States Navy has only four battleships which are less than ten years old, the California and Maryland, commissioned in 1921, and the Colorado and West Virginia, commissioned in 1923. By next year only the last two will be within the ten-year age limit, which is considered the period of first line service.
The great ships Lexington and Saratoga, each 888 feet long, were originally intended to be battle cruisers, but under the terms of the Washington naval conference were converted into aircraft carriers and commissioned as such in 1927. Each can carry forty combat planes and thirty-two bombing planes.
Owing to difference of opinion regarding the value of battleships in modern warfare, it is probable that few, if any, of these vessels will be built in future. Costing from twenty-five million dollars up, a battleship or battle cruiser represents a lot of money—too much, many think, to put into one fighting unit.

A public office is a public trust administered for the benefit of the public and not for private profit. It is not a question of who most needs the office for his private benefit, but rather who is best qualified to render efficient service to the people. A Justice of the Peace is entitled to the emoluments of the office, but the vital question for the public to consider is character, education and experience fitting the candidate for the office to which he aspires.

Among those who are aspiring to the office of Justice of the Peace of the First township, W. H. Clay has peculiar qualification which especially fit him for the position. He has been actively engaged in the practice of law for over twenty-one years in San Mateo and San Francisco counties, has a college education, and his integrity has never been questioned.

He resides in Daly City, but there are two positions to be filled and should he be elected for the one at South San Francisco he will reside there and hold court at the usual place in the City Hall.

He believes in the administration of the law with reason, and with fairness and justice to all, and will give attention to cases coming under the Small Claims Court equally with those involving larger amounts, so that those who have claims under fifty dollars may have the services of the Court without the necessity of employing counsel.

He asks the favorable consideration of the voting public on the 4th of November, 1930.

Sacred Chinese Temple Taken Over by Bandits

Mount Lushan, one of the twelve sacred mountains of China, famed alike for the piety of its monks and for the beauty of its scenery, has been entirely pre-empted by bandits. The once sacred grottoes, formerly given over to the contemplation of immense carved images of Buddha, or to the rites of Taoist priests, are now used as prisons. Ancient Chinese writings declare that Mount Dushan was "10 miles high and 240 miles in circumference." Today Lushan rises only a little more than 4,000 feet, but it affords an unsurpassed view southward over the gulf of Pechili and eastward toward the Liaotung peninsula, on which the Russians built Port Arthur and on which the Japanese now occupy Dairen. Lushan is very rugged, and in olden times every cliff was ornamented with a temple. Yehlituy, the famous Chitan who rose to power under Genghis Khan, was an especial devotee of Lushan and legends have it that he selected this mountain to be "the eternal trustee of wisdom." Accordingly he is supposed to have buried 10,000 sacred books in a cavern under the peak of the mountain, and then to have erected over his repository the temple which today is a bleak ruin.

Old English Custom of Wassailing Apple Trees

During the month of January, Somerset (England) farmers participate in the time-honored custom of "wassailing" the apple trees so as to insure a bumper apple crop. The ceremony takes place at night by the flickering and uncertain light of a lantern. The villagers gather in each orchard in turn, round the largest apple trees they can find. A bucket of cider accompanies them, in which a small piece of toast is dipped and placed in the branches. Then an old chant is sung, starting: "Old apple-tree, old apple-tree, we've come to wassail thee." This song concludes with an exhortation to the tree to:

grow apples now:
Hats full, caps full, three bushel bags full,
Big barn floors full, and a little heap under the stair.

Then guns are fired and the villagers drink the health of the trees in cider. It is a quaint custom, and has been kept up for centuries.

Fertile Nile Valley

The waters of the Nile, which attain their greatest height in September, commence to recede in October, leaving behind them a rich, fertile soil, which first appears in the form of islands. To these the canny Egyptians row out at the earliest possible moment to plant melon-seeds, so that the melon-plants may mature, and fruit ripen, before the waters begin to rise again in June. One of the commonest sights in Egypt in the spring is a long string of camels roped nose-to-tail, and led by a small boy; each animal bearing on its back a huge netful of round green water-melons.

Trees in United States

The number of tree species varies enormously throughout the world, says Forests and Mankind. Over that great stretch covered by north Russia, Sweden, and Norway, the forests contain only about half a dozen tree species. In the hardwood forests of the East, one can find ten times that many in an afternoon's walk. Tropical forests have thousands of known species and perhaps hundreds more not yet discovered. About eight hundred different tree species grow in the United States.

Words Changed by Time

A "heathen" originally was a dweller on a heath. The early Christians were mostly persons living in cities or walled towns; and the wild, half-savage dwellers of the moorland heaths were among the last to abandon their old gods.

In England the letter "e" was formerly pronounced like "a," and because the village clergyman was usually the most socially prominent individual in the place he became "the person." We still preserve the old pronunciation and call him the parson.

At the morning service at Calvary Baptist Chapel, 5724 Mission street, the Pastor will speak on "The Shepherd King of Israel." It will be a message on the 23rd Psalm.

The evening message will be "The Real Miracle Man Today." Is the real miracle man a football coach? Is he the wizard inventor? Is he a world conqueror? The people today are looking for a miracle man. Come Sunday night and hear this topic discussed. Bring a friend with you and help make it a great service.

On Friday night, November 7, Festival Night will take place. Another excellent program has been prepared, including three reels of motion pictures titled "The Pilgrims," which is most fitting to this Thanksgiving month. Refreshments of punch, coffee and cake will be served. Booths of various descriptions will be held, among them a fancy work booth.

Rally Day as been set for November 9. On this day the entire Sunday School body will return their dime banks, which offering will go towards the Chapel's missionary budget. The various departments will take part in this program. It is another big day planned at Calvary Chapel.

At the Wednesday night's prayer meeting we will continue the study of 1 Peter, the second chapter. This study has created much interest and willingness to learn the great truths which lie between the covers of the Bible.

The B. Y. P. U.'s have also prepared some interesting meetings Sunday night beginning at 7 P. M. Promptly at 6:45 P. M. one reel of motion picture will be shown titled "The Earth." It will be a comparison of earth and moon. Magnetism of the earth. Near view of sections of surface of moon. Craters on moon. Size of sun compared to earth. Moon circling earth and both circling sun. An eclipse. Glowing gases surround sun. Total eclipse. Gravity. Causes of vapor. How coal was formed. Causes of floods.

FREE HUNTINGTON LIBRARY FROM TAXATION

THE late Henry E. Huntington gave in trust for the people, the great Huntington Library and Art Gallery, and created a trust fund for its support as "a free Public Library, Art Gallery, Museum and Park for the advancement of learning, and to promote the public welfare."

It is a library of libraries—a collection of collections. It comprises 175,000 separate titles of printed books and about 800,000 manuscripts. It contains the vellum Gutenberg Bible, a remarkable Shakespeare collection and more than 5300 titles of books printed on movable type before the year 1501.

It contains, among other treasures, the Gainsborough "Blue Boy," Reynolds' "Tragic Muse," and Romney's "Lady Hamilton."

A. S. W. Rosenbach, probably the greatest living authority, says—

"... Mr. Henry E. Huntington was the greatest collector of books the world has ever known. The library will be the Mecca of students for all time."

The California Legislature placed on the ballot for the coming elections (Proposition No. 15) a Constitutional Amendment to free this property from taxation, just as Stanford University was freed some years ago, but added the safeguard that the legislature may revoke the exemption at any time. This amendment is specifically endorsed by the California Taxpayers Association and merits the support of the voters. Vote Yes.

GENERAL ELECTION NOVEMBER 4, 1930

To the Voters of San Mateo County: "5,000,000 San Mateo County Fund for Water or Politicians!"

On the evening before the Primary Election, last August 26th, there was published in the form of half-page advertisements in several local newspapers, an article of sensational nature and caption as quoted above. The present County Surveyor, George A. Kneese, candidate for re-election, gave an address over the radio the same evening in which he repeated exactly the charges made in the advertisement.

While I have no intention of being drawn into a campaign of personalities and no desire of being elected County Surveyor by the method of attacking either the character or ability of my opponent (and I trust he will accord me the same courtesy), still the advertisement and radio address referred to contained so many false charges that I believe the PUBLIC is entitled to the following presentation of facts:

Among the charges made there was one to the effect that James S. James, also a candidate for County Surveyor, had become very much interested in this "$5,000,000 SAN MATEO COUNTY FUND FOR WATER OR POLITICIANS,"—that James, finding that the Water District was likely to be a certainty, had organized an Engineering Company in Burlingame for the sole purpose of running for County Surveyor, to thereby "BE BEST IN POSITION TO GRAB OFF THE ENGINEERING BUSINESS FOR HIS PRIVATE CORPORATION."

The truth is that I incorporated my private Engineering Practice for the sole purpose of permitting the Engineers associated with me to obtain an interest in the business they have helped me build up. It is the fortune of the WRONG KIND of politics, however, that I should be accused of TRYING TO CREATE the very condition in County affairs that I am, in fact, trying to HELP REMEDY. IT IS MY FIRM CONVICTION THAT THE DAY WHEN THE COUNTY SURVEYOR OF SAN MATEO COUNTY WILL BE ABLE TO "GRAB OFF" ANY OF THESE SPECIAL PRIVILEGES IS PAST.

The article under discussion further attempted to put forward what it called the "Kneese Plan" for the County Water District and concluded with the following statement: "Surely, you would accept the Kneese plan, urging the advice and supervision by internationally famous experts, in preference to an engineer repudiated and dismissed by his own home City."

I have no quarrel with any plan proposing the employment of internationally famous or other experts, but the fact remains that the only plan advanced to date was fully covered by the Engineers' Report dated July 9, 1929, and signed by the following Engineers:

Chas. D. Marx, Professor Emeritus, Stanford University.
J. F. Byxbee, City Engineer, Palo Alto.
GEORGE A. KNEESE, COUNTY SURVEYOR.
C. L. Dimmit, City Engineer, Redwood City.
James S. James, Civil Engineer, Burlingame.
Oscar F. Weisgerber, City Manager, San Mateo.

(Presumably we are all guilty of the same ulterior motives!)

This report advised the Public that there was serious and immediate danger of a water shortage on the Peninsula and recommended that the proper authorities take the necessary steps to meet the situation. The report did not touch upon the employment of either Engineers or International Experts. The Kneese Plan is a myth created for political purposes.

The reference to "an Engineer repudiated and dismissed by his own City" is PERSONAL. It is also UNTRUE. I regret to learn of my opponent's familiarity with the purpose and motives which actuated the attempt to create this impression. That this attempt failed of its purpose was amply demonstrated to my satisfaction by the vote cast in the Primary Election on August 26th.

I TRUST THAT THESE LAST MINUTE ATTACKS, BRINGING OUT NEW ISSUES FULL OF FALSEHOODS TOO LATE FOR REPLY BY THE OPPOSING CANDIDATE, WILL NOT BE RESORTED TO AGAIN IN THIS CAMPAIGN PRECEDING THE GENERAL ELECTION, NOVEMBER 4th.

Sincerely yours,

JAMES S. JAMES,

Burlingame, California, October 14, 1930.

Candidate for County Surveyor.

TOWN GRAVE-DIGGERS

In nearly every community may be found quite a number of persons who consider themselves leading citizens, but who in truth are helping to dig a grave for their town.

They do it through their failure to support the institutions which make the town what it is. They do it by sending away for merchandise which might be bought with equal advantage at home. They do it frequently through thoughtlessness, but often through sheer disregard for the welfare of the community of which they are a part.

The doctrine of buying at home is not advanced solely in the interest of individual merchants. It is advocated because every citizen of a town is to a certain extent dependent upon every other citizen for his own prosperity. Business men are sometimes as greatly at fault as anyone else in the matter of out-of-town trading.

If the shoe dealer sends away for his automobile tires, and the automobile man sends away for his furniture, and the furniture man sends away for his clothing, and so on, how can they expect to build local prosperity?

All the fine talk about civic pride that we may indulge in will never make a town, so long as the life-blood of the community—the cold cash—is spent elsewhere.

A man may make boosting speeches until he is black in the face, but unless he spends his money where he

PAPERS REFLECT TOWN

It is generally recognized that a town may be rather accurately judged so far as its progressiveness is concerned, by the way in which it supports its newspaper. In other words a creditable and prosperous looking newspaper may be safely taken as an indication of a live and enterprising community.

The reason is plain. A live town naturally demands a representative newspaper, or newspapers, and there will always be found someone to meet the demands. Almost without exception it may be found that a town has just about as good a newspaper as it deserves; sometimes better than it deserves.

In this connection a quotation from an address by James J. O'Shaughnessy, former executive secretary of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, is to the point. In the light of his many years of experience in dealing with newspapers, he says:

"I have been widely quoted as saying that the village weekly newspaper is the cornerstone of American journalism. No one has disputed that assertion. Modern communities, large and small, grow and prosper in the wake of their newspapers. If their newspapers are prosperous, retail business prospers and real estate appreciates in value."

makes it, he is a home-town grave-digger.

ARE WE USING OUR OUNCE?

Are we using that "Ounce of Prevention" in Daly City, or do we pay the "pound" for the cure?

It is well worth considering—and considering carefully.

Today we have the advantages of agencies for good health which were not dreamed of a few years ago. We now have other proven facilities which were known of, possibly, but which, according to the standard of living of even fifteen years ago, were not looked upon as being vital in the health of the individual, and so the health of the community.

Some of these points are still subjects of debate. Others are universally practiced. There is a difference of opinion on vaccination; there is a difference of opinion on pasteurized milk; but there is no difference of opinion as to the value of sick room sanitation and the imperative need of the growing child for wholesome milk.

There is a difference of opinion still as to the true answer to the question of why thousands succumb yearly to tuberculosis, but there is a national enthusiasm back of the Christmas Seal movement. Playgrounds and play-time for children, careful feeding of children and adults alike, scientific sanitation in the home, all more or less recent—but all valuable to Daly City.

We have in the professional and business activities of our town, on the shelves of store and pharmacy, in soda fountain and restaurant, hundreds of aids to more healthy living. And a more healthy community would mean a more wealthy community.

A look to our community health conditions, a look to our personal health standards, a thought to our business and personal future would all help to remind us that, given these opportunities, we should grasp them to bring about the HEALTH we should have in our OWN life, in the life of OUR TOWN.

TIME TABLE OF 1830

The first railroad time table published in the South, issued at Charleston in 1830, announcing the schedule for a short line out of that city, contained a provision which would appear amusing to present day travelers. It gave the information that arrangements for special trips could be made "by agreement with the engineer."

There was only one locomotive in service on the road. It was the "Best Friend of Charleston," the first locomotive built in America, and it weighed only about four tons. It arrived in Charleston from the West Point foundry in New York City by ship on October 23, 1830, and was put in regular service on Christmas day of the same year. The first time table, which has been preserved, contained the following information:

"The Public are respectfully informed that the Railroad Company has purchased from Mr. E. L. Miller his Locomotive Steam Engine and that it will hereafter be constantly employed in the transportation of passengers."

"The time of leaving the station in Line street will be 8 o'clock, at 10 A. M., at 1 and half past 3 o'clock P. M."

"Parties may be accommodated at the intermediate hours by agreeing with the Engineer. Great punctuality will be observed in the time of starting."

But perhaps 100 years from now people will look upon the facilities and practices of the present day with as much amusement as we now find in looking back upon those of a century ago.

SOME PURITAN CUT-UPS

Those who depend on the regular historical works of the school-book type no doubt have formed the idea that the Puritan forefathers of New England were about as perfect as folks could be.

The iconoclasts have been at work again, however, and have dug up some old records which appear to show that human nature was about the same in the old days as it is at present.

A recent writer quotes at length from a Massachusetts court docket of 1646, of which a few sample cases are given as follows:

Henry Walton was fined for saying he would as leave hear a dog bark as to hear Reverend Cobble preach.

John Studley fined for stealing his master's ox and selling it to him.

Thomas Gray, of Marblehead, was whipped for being overseen in drink.

Phillip Crumwell fined for not living with his wife.

William Claus whipped for spying into the chamber of his master and telling what he saw.

Charles Phillips fined for being in drink three times in two days.

Mrs. Griffith fined for swearing.

Sarah Parrig fined for wearing a silk hood.

Sarah Collins fined for railing at her husband and calling him a "pot-gutted devil."

Photographs seldom do us justice, being fortunately tempered with mercy.

The average man's delusion is the idea that he will some day get out of debt.

SHOULD REWARD FAITHFUL SERVICE

Faithful service for the public by George A. Kneese promises to be rewarded in a handsome manner in only a few days. The campaign of the popular official has been intensive. No effort has been spared by his friends to inform the electors of San Mateo county just how valuable a servant he is to our fast growing commonwealth.

The opportunity to do the right thing for George Kneese comes at the General Election next Tuesday. Only a few hours are left in which to swing the last of the half-persuaded voters into line. Superlatives are out of place usually, but we cannot resist pointing out that the county government without George Kneese would be almost equivalent to the play of Hamlet with the Melancholy Dane not in the dramatic personae.

Our County Surveyor has been in office for twelve years and his reelection is imperative in order that the important work now under way should be continued. The county is going forward with remarkable speed and the pace will be considerably accelerated by keeping George Kneese at the helm. Not the least semblance of an argument has come to our ears for discarding the tried and popular official. It is a trite thing to say, but George Kneese is the right man in the right place.

An economical administration is the slogan of the Kneese office. The Surveyor has made good with a vengeance and it is up to you, fellow citizens, to accord him a tremendous vote at the polls. Keep him where he belongs and let him go on with the comprehensive work he has mapped out.

Perhaps not enough attention has been paid to this truth—the progress of our rich county is dependent in large measure on the carrying out of the manifold duties of the office of surveyor. Problems relating to zoning, street improvements, transportation facilities and other pressing matters must be solved and solved right. Without fear of any possible contradiction we can say George Kneese is the only man for working out the required solutions.

Return County Surveyor Kneese to his high post. It is your privilege, citizens, and will redound immeasurably to your credit in the years to come.

INDUSTRY SPREADS OUT

Instead of further concentrating in the larger cities, the present tendency of industrial plants is toward the smaller towns, according to a recent magazine writer, who considers this one of the most far-reaching movements of recent years.

Some of the reasons for this decentralization of industry are given, among them being the bringing of factories closer to the raw materials and the ultimate consumer, thus reducing transportation charges; the extension of cheap electric service to the smaller cities and towns; lower living costs and better surroundings for employees, and in many cases a more intelligent and more dependable labor supply.

Summing up the results which this movement will bring about, the writer says that from now on we may expect to see a marked movement toward these smaller cities and towns, instead of having vast populations necessary for large production herded together in a few big cities.

This trend of industry affords the small town its opportunity to share in the benefits of industrial payrolls. Besides, the industrial workers create a better market for farm produce. Thus industry and agriculture may go hand and hand in the upbuilding of those communities which take advantage of their opportunities in this direction.

HIS GOOD TURN

That human kindness is still abundant and sometimes manifests itself under unexpected circumstances is illustrated by a little story in the Paris Figaro.

A Paris "young man about town" being driven in a handsome closed car was halted at a street intersection to let a hearse pass. The hearse was followed only by a woman and two small children on foot. It was raining hard and she was trying to protect them with a shabby umbrella as they sorrowfully followed the father's corpse to the cemetery.

The young man stepped from his car, asked the widow and children to get in and instructed his chauffeur to take them to the cemetery and then to their home. Then he bowed to the bereaved group and hailed a taxi for his own use.

And the Recording Angel wrote that on that day a blase boulevardier had done his good turn.

Senator Brookhart suggests that the West and South unite for political action. The Outlook nominates the Senator for the job of uniting them.

Al Wilson, stunt flyer, was seriously hurt by falling out of bed, failing to make even a two-point landing.

SEEING THE SIGHTS

It is difficult to imagine the sensations experienced by persons from isolated sections of the world, particularly island dwellers, when first brought into contact with the facilities of modern life.

A dispatch tells of the wonder with which Rachael Gillies, a 17-year-old girl from the island of St. Kilda, off the Scottish coast, first saw a horse, an automobile, a railroad train and a moving picture on her first visit to the mainland.

Thousands of people live and die without seeing any of these things, although they live within a comparatively short distance of them.

But it is not only those who live in sparsely settled localities who are unfamiliar with objects which are commonplace to the great majority. Not long ago a large and curious crowd gathered in a certain section of New York City to see a strange animal which had often been heard of but never witnessed by those who gathered to gaze upon the beast.

It was a cow.

COTTON AFFECTS ALL

Considered offhand, it might appear that the present plight of the cotton farmers affects only themselves, or at most only those portions of the country where cotton is the principal crop.

It requires but a little reflection, however, to understand that when the buying power of the cotton farmer is reduced, his ability to absorb the products of industry is likewise curtailed, and the manufacturers of all commodities, wherever located, are correspondingly affected.

The movement to find new uses for cotton, therefore, deserves the support of manufacturers of the North and East, and of the producers of any commodity whatsoever which finds a market in the cotton belt.

It is believed that cotton could be largely used instead of jute, of which we import 700,000,000 pounds a year, in the manufacture of cord, twine, burlap, bagging and the like. Many articles of wearing apparel now made of other material might be satisfactorily fabricated from cotton. Government economists assert that uses for an additional 2,000,000 bales of cotton a year might be found if the public generally would co-operate in the movement.

A greater consumption of cotton will benefit the whole country.

THE STORY

Garrett O'Hara, young lawyer, on his way to practice at Concho, wild western town, is shot at from ambush. He hears the desperado who fired the shot, Shep Sanderson, talking to Barbara Steelman, who thought the shot was directed at her. Garrett not to go to Concho, center of a big cattle war. He insists. She tells him to see Steve Worrall. In town Sanderson picks a fight with Garrett and is getting the worst of it when Ingram, cattle baron, interrupts. Worrall tells Garrett about the cattle war between Ingram and Steelman.

CHAPTER III

"If Not For Us, Against Us"

O'Hara had no difficulty finding the place for which he was looking. There were only two large stores in the town. The one at this end had a long sign along the front which read: "INGRAM & HARVEY."

Into the big adobe building O'Hara walked.

Five or six men were lounging near the front of the store. All of them were openly armed. Some wore a holster swung low on the front thigh. One had his hand on the breast. Two carried a pair of revolvers. More than one had a rifle also.

Two men were in the little office shut off from the rest of the store. One of them was Ingram. He called to O'Hara.

"Come in. Meet my partner, Mr. Harvey." To Harvey he said: "Tom, this is the man I was tellin' you about."

Harvey was a short, thickset man with hard, protruding eyes. His face was pallid, his mouth a slit narrowed by thin lips tightly pressed together. A ruthless man, one might guess, but without the character that gave his partner individuality.

"Glameechou," he unlocked his lips to say, all in one gulped word.

If he was glad he did not look it. There was no expression whatever in his chalky eyes.

"Where you from, Mr. O'Hara?" asked Ingram.

The Easterner told him. He answered other questions, put sharply and incisively. Where had he studied law? Who did he know in Concho? Why had he come here?

O'Hara had taken an instant dislike to Harvey, but he did not feel the same toward his partner. It was odd, too, he reflected later. Evidently it was a matter of personality. This bronzed handsome man, who carried himself with such lithe ease, came none too well recommended. He could snuff out a human life with no regret. Undoubtedly he was unscrupulous, probably a cow thief. But he had the force that goes with a strong character, either good or bad. Masterful he was and always would be.

"How come you to start trouble with Shep Sanderson?" asked Harvey, speaking for the first time since his word of gulped greeting at introduction.

"Did I start trouble with him, Mr. Harvey?" O'Hara replied, a steely note in his voice. "He shot at me from ambush while I was on the public road. Later he assaulted me in a dance hall. Afraid we differ in our points of view."

"I'm not chewin' words but talkin' turkey. Shep's ugly as galvanized sin when he's sore at anyone. Well, he's sore at you."

Ingram flung this aside with a gesture. "Forget about Shep. He'll lay off this young fellow. I'll see to that." He turned abruptly to the lawyer. "How about you, O'Hara? Can you live under yore own hat? Will you stand by yore boss long as there's a button on Jabe's coat? Have you got sand in yore craw?"

O'Hara answered, in the low, gentle voice that was sometimes so deceptive, since it led men to believe that he was meek. "To take your questions in order, Mr. Ingram: I do not talk about my clients' affairs, if that's what you mean. Nor do I sell out to the opposition when I engage to carry on legal business. Only time will tell whether I am too timid to live in Concho."

"Listen, O'Hara," said Ingram, looking straight at him. "Wait till I tell you the line-up. We're startin' a finish fight against Wes Steelman. He's run the San Marcos country long enough. He sure can't come up here into the hills and dictate what's what. It's a showdown. We're callin' his hand. Our friends are his enemies. Everybody that amounts to a tinker's dam will have to choose which side he'll be on."

"Why? Why not be neutral?"

"If you're not for us you're against us."

O'Hara rose from the chair where he was sitting. "I don't accept that conclusion, Mr. Ingram. But let me first reply to your offer. I decline it. I won't be anybody's man and wear a collar round my neck. I'll not engage to support a cause beyond the point where it seems to me just. You want me to be your lawyer and yet tie me hand and foot. I can't do it. No man of spirit could."

"Then you'd better get right out of Concho. You're not wanted here," Ingram said bluntly.

"Why? I'm not in this fight. I've nothing to do with it. I don't intend to have."

"You chuckle-headed fool, you'll be in it an' out of it inside of three days if you stay," Harvey jeered. "Shep Sanderson will take care of that. All we've got to do is say the word."

"Why should you say it?" asked O'Hara, his eyes steadily on Ingram. "I've done you no harm. I'm not in this fight against you. I'm a stranger here and intend to take no part in it."

Ingram gave a short scornful bark of laughter. "You're one of these fellows that know it all an' can't be told anything. All right. Play yore own hand. Suits me if it does you. But before you walk out of this room listen to me. It's good medicine, what I'm tellin' you. There's not a gather of beeves in this country that either Wes Steelman or I haven't a hand in, not a ton of freight moves that one of us ain't interested in directly or indirectly. If you can read yore title clear to practice law here an' not do business with the one or the other of us you'll sure have to be fed by the ravens. You got to make yore choice if you stay here—him or me, one."

The other partner cut in unpleasantly: "Maybe he's made it, Dave. I reckon he's already tied up with Steelman."

O'Hara looked at Harvey. "I've never even met him," he said with a touch of anger.

"You might of met his agent where you come from. We'll know right soon where you're at, young fellow." The jeering voice was an insult.

The lawyer's jaw set. "I don't have to explain my private business to you, Mr. Harvey. I'm a citizen of a free country."

At which Harvey laughed maliciously. "All right, Mr. Free Citizen, go right on down the road an' see where you head in."

There was something cruel, inhuman, about that laughter. It was without any of the milk of natural kindness in it. Later, remembering it, O'Hara was able better to understand some of the events that followed.

Ingram rose. "All right. 'Nough said. Adios, Mr. O'Hara," he cut in by way of curt dismissal.

O'Hara turned away, not without regret. He had made the only choice possible to him. None the less, he was sorry. The personality of this strong fighting cattle man rather fascinated him.

He caught sight of the Innocent Bystander and stopped to say "Good-morning." Worrall was standing in the road, one foot on the hub of a wagon wheel. He was giving instructions to a mule skinner about to start on a two-hundred-and-fifty miles drive to the railroad. He finished what he had to say to the teamster and then strolled over toward the Gold Nugget, in front of which O'Hara was waiting.

Out of the Gold Nugget came a young man. He was a slight boyish fellow in the garb of a cowboy: high-heeled boots, flannel shirt, open waistcoat, wide gray hat, and two six-shooters. His eyes were a very light cold blue, his chin receded, two prominent buck teeth showed. He seemed friendly and amiable, and on the whole was not bad looking. O'Hara remembered him as one of the young fellows in Ingram's store.

He stopped to grin at Worrall. "How's the temperature up where you live, Shorty?"

The freighter smiled down at him from his six feet plus. "Meet Mr.

"We're Startin' a Finish Fight Against Wes Steelman."

O'Hara, Bob. Mr. O'Hara, shake hands with Bob Quantrell."

This ceremony concluded, Quantrell remarked that it was right hot for so early in the summer and continued, spurs trailing, on his casual way. Worrall lowered his voice. "You may like to know that you've just shaken hands with a real killer. Bob Quantrell has bumped off a heap of men in his time."

O'Hara was amazed. "That boy? Why, he can't be more than nineteen or twenty."

"Eighteen last month. He told me so himself. I can name seven or eight he's killed, an' the story is that's not more'n half of those he has got."

"He doesn't look like a desperate character."

"I didn't say he was," Worrall demurred. "But he sure would make yore friend Shep Sanderson look like a nickel Mex if they got in a rumput. Say, I got news for you. There's another stranger in town, an' the boys are expectin' some fun. He's a belted earl."

"A what?"

"That's what we call these rich Englishmen that maverick around."

"What's he doing here?"

"I dunno. He'll go into cattle an' drop a fortune. They all do. Conditions here ain't what they been used to. He parts his name in the middle. Smith-Beresford is what he calls himself."

At dinner, which of course was in the middle of the day, O'Hara had his first opportunity to see the Englishman. Smith-Beresford was a round ruddy man in riding boots and breeches. He had the clean scrubbed look characteristic of some of his race.

Bob Quantrell came into the hotel to get dinner and sat down in the only vacant chair at the long table. It happened to be next to Smith-Beresford, and the Englishman at once engaged him in talk.

O'Hara noticed that Quantrell's voice was low and soft. At first he was inclined to be reserved, but evidently the overseas man took his fancy, for he warmed up and ceased to answer in monosyllables. Before dinner was over he and the Englishman had their heads together and were planning a bear hunt. Afterward the two disappeared. Smith-Beresford had taken the young fellow to his room to show him the collection of hunting guns he had brought. Later they came back to the lobby, the Britisher accompanying his guest to the front door.

"We'll have a jolly good hunt, old chap," he said. "I'll depend on you to look after the horses and that sort of thing. I suppose you know a good horse when you see one."

"I think so."

"Then, by Jove, we'll have a rip-pin' time."

O'Hara departed. On the street he met Steve Worrall. The owner of the Longhorn corral wasted no words in greeting.

"Judge Warner come through as expected an' appointed Wes Steelman administrator of the estate of Jess Hughes. 'Most every man in the room was wearin' an arsenal. Wes had half a dozen gunmen with him an' so did Dave. Wouldn't have surprised me if war had started right there an' then, but I reckon the orders were for none of the boys to make a play. Well, soon now. That's my guess."

Worrall spoke in a low voice, for walls sometimes had ears. Concho was a town divided against itself. Spies and partisans were everywhere. "Isn't there any way of stopping it? Couldn't they compromise?"

"They could, but they won't," Worrall answered. "Miss Barbara, she's worked on Wes considerable, but he's stubborn as a government mule. An' talkin' about angels, if we can't hear the rustle of their wings, look who's sashayin' down the road."

O'Hara looked. A party of riders was coming down the dusty street. Those in advance were a grizzled, heavy-set man in his late forties and a young woman whom O'Hara at once recognized as Barbara Steelman.

Miss Steelman spoke to the man beside her and the party drew up beside Worrall and the lawyer. There were seven men in the group, all armed with rifles as well as six-shooters.

"This is Mr. O'Hara," the young woman said. "Mr. O'Hara, this is my father. I've been tellin' him about you."

Wesley Steelman's strong face had tanned to a leathery brown by a thousand summer suns and winter winds. Deep blue eyes looked straight at the man to whom he was being introduced. He had fought his way up from the ranks, asking no man's favor, rising by sheer force of will and brain to the position he held of cattle king of the San Marcos. Looking at him, O'Hara could understand why. He was a man's man, with a frank and friendly manner. Probably generous and kindly to those who supported him.

"Glad to have you with us, Mr. O'Hara," he said heartily, and swung from the saddle to shake hands with the lawyer. "My daughter says you think of stayin' here. Hope you decide to do so. We can use some good citizens."

"That's not what I told him," Barbara said, smiling at the young man.

"Fact, just the same. Time this country was gettin' civilized. Mr. O'Hara, lemme make you acquainted with my friends. Shake hands with Jack Phillips an' Texas Jim."

While O'Hara's hand passed from one strong grip to another he became aware that another group of horsemen was approaching. They rode three abreast, in two rows. Ingram was in front, Harvey on his left, and Bob Quantrell on the right and nearest the other group.

As they passed, Quantrell laughed, insolently, gaily. "They're sayin' good-by to each other," he murmured, just loud enough to be heard. "Well, you never can tell."

Luph Harcourt Smith-Beresford came down the street. He joined the Steelman party. Already he had met the big cattle man and his daughter.

With a lift of the hand toward the lawyer, Barbara said: "Make you acquainted with Mr. O'Hara, Mr. Smith-Beresford."

The two men shook hands.

Steelman spoke: "We've got to be gettin' along home. Then we'll expect you out tomorrow mornin', Mr. Smith-Beresford. Better bring Mr. O'Hara with you. We'll show you some good huntin' an' fishin'."

"Afraid I'd be some trouble, Mr. Steelman," O'Hara said, much desiring to accept the invitation.

"Not any in the world," the cattleman answered carelessly. "We don't ask you if we don't want you, Mr. O'Hara."

"Then I'll certainly come."

After the Steelman party had ridden away the Englishman dismounted and tied his horse to a hitch rack.

"I say, Mr. O'Hara, feel like a B. and S."

O'Hara did not, but he walked into the nearest saloon with the other tenderfoot. They sat down at a small table and the Easterner took a small glass of beer.

They chatted for a few minutes. At first they were alone except for the bartender, but presently three or four men came in. One of them was young Bob Quantrell, another Shep Sanderson.

The Ingram men were standing at the bar, ready to drink. Sanderson became aware that there were two other men in the saloon. Scarcely looking in their direction, he waved them forward.

"On me. Everybody drink." There was arrogance in the invitation, which was almost a command.

The two men at the table did not move.

Sanderson swung his head. "Hear me? Come an' drink."

Then he recognized first O'Hara, and afterward the Englishman. His hand slid slowly toward the butt of his .44 and he moved a step or two toward the sitting men.

"So it's you, eh?" His shallow cruel eyes rested on O'Hara. They narrowed, taking on a curious glitter. "Well, you ain't teacher's pet any longer, young fellow, see, an' you're my meat. Me talkin'—Shep Sanderson. Understand?"

Smith-Beresford did not, at least.

Honeybee Travels Far for Load of Sweetness

Confirming the honeybee's reputation for diligence, the United States Department of Agriculture recently learned that a bee will sometimes fly as much as eight miles and return with its minute load. Under such circumstances a single pound of honey would represent approximately 18,000 trips of 16 miles each, or nearly 300,000 miles of flight by bees.

In a locality in Wyoming where irrigated alfalfa is virtually the only source of honey the department placed some hives eight miles from the nearest nectar supply. The bees made daily trips to the alfalfa, loaded with honey, and returned. Since the bees flew this distance regularly, the department agriculturists assume they might fly even farther if necessary.

Flying these 16-mile trips, however, some bees fail to return home because sand storms overtake them, or head winds impede them. Laden with honey, they are forced to rest often on the way home, particularly when flying into the wind or in cool weather. When they reach the hive after such long trips they often make abnormal landings and frequently fall to alight at the entrance of the hive.

Great Medical Discovery

A young Canadian surgeon, Dr. F. G. Banting, returned from four years of service at the front in the World war with the idea of the new remedy, insulin. He submitted his plans to Professor MacLeod of the University of Toronto, and under the latter's direction, with the assistance of Mr. C. H. Best and others, experiments were begun in May, 1921. After a preliminary trial of the remedy on himself, Doctor Banting saw the first case of diabetes to be treated with insulin to receive his injection in the Toronto General hospital, January 10, 1922. This date marks an important discovery in modern medicine.

Wall at High Altitude

Some of the mountains over which the famous Chinese wall was built ranged as high as 5,000 feet.

Helpful Hint

"Here! now!" yelled Constable Slackpooter of Petunia. "What in torment d'ye mean fiddling and phillandering all over the streets with that automobile the way you've been a-doin' today?"

"This is my first car," answered the offender, "and I haven't more than half learned how to drive it yet. I want to turn around, but there doesn't seem to be room enough in any of the streets here."

"Well, you just drive over to Torpidville, six miles away, circumnavigate the public square there, come back here and you'll be turned around."—Kansas City Star.

"He'll Give You a Game His Own Self, Hooray!"

"See here, my man, if you think you can come in here and bully me—"

O'Hara interrupted, to cry out sharply, "He's not armed. Neither he nor I. Both of us unarmed."

His voice was a warning rather than an appeal. It served notice on the killer that to slay now would be outside the code, that even his own companions would disapprove and perhaps not protect him from Steelman's vengeance.

Sanderson sputtered. "You're packin' a gun somewhere an' you're scared to draw it. You're a liar when you claim—"

The man's .44 jerked up swiftly, for Smith-Beresford had done an amazing thing. The little man had thrust his head forward, so that now his eyes were not six inches from the end of the barrel.

"Shoot an' be hanged, you coward. You haven't the pluck to fire."

O'Hara thought that for one dreadful moment his heart had stopped pumping. To plunge forward, to make the least move, would be the signal for Sanderson to shoot. He could only wait helplessly in the heavy silence while the drama worked itself out.

It seemed forever before Sanderson's slow mind made its choice. He spoke hoarsely, savagely, "Go an' get heeled, both of you, an' when you see me, come a-shootin', fellows."

Quantrell's boyish laugh rang out and broke the tension. "He sure went for you all spraddled out, like he thought you was a big wind pudding. Another minute an' I reckon he would have crawled yore big frame the way his friend did last night. I'm buyin' chips, Shep. This gent has got sand in his craw, an' he's my friend. Lay off him."

"This other tenderfoot yore friend, too?" Sanderson asked sulkily.

The boy looked at O'Hara. He had watched this episode with wary, cool detachment, and he had seen the lawyer step forward to join his companion in front of the furious bad man. Tenderfoot he undoubtedly was, but like the other he had shown courage of a high order.

"Lay off him, too, Shep, an' see you do or I'll give you a game. I'm yore loadin', any jump to the road." Quantrell laid down the law to the other killer carelessly, almost casually, with the supreme confidence of one who knows himself chief.

O'Hara's pride was touched. He did not want to hide behind an eighteen-year-old boy. "I don't know anything about a gun, but if you'll give me three weeks I'll get ready for this man," he said.

The young desperado's eyes lit. "Good enough, Shep. Lay off three weeks, an' then hop to it if you like. He'll give you a game his own self. Hooray!"

"Him! That pilgrim! Gimme a game—me, Shep Sanderson! Fool talk. That's all it is." The bad man snorted contemptuously.

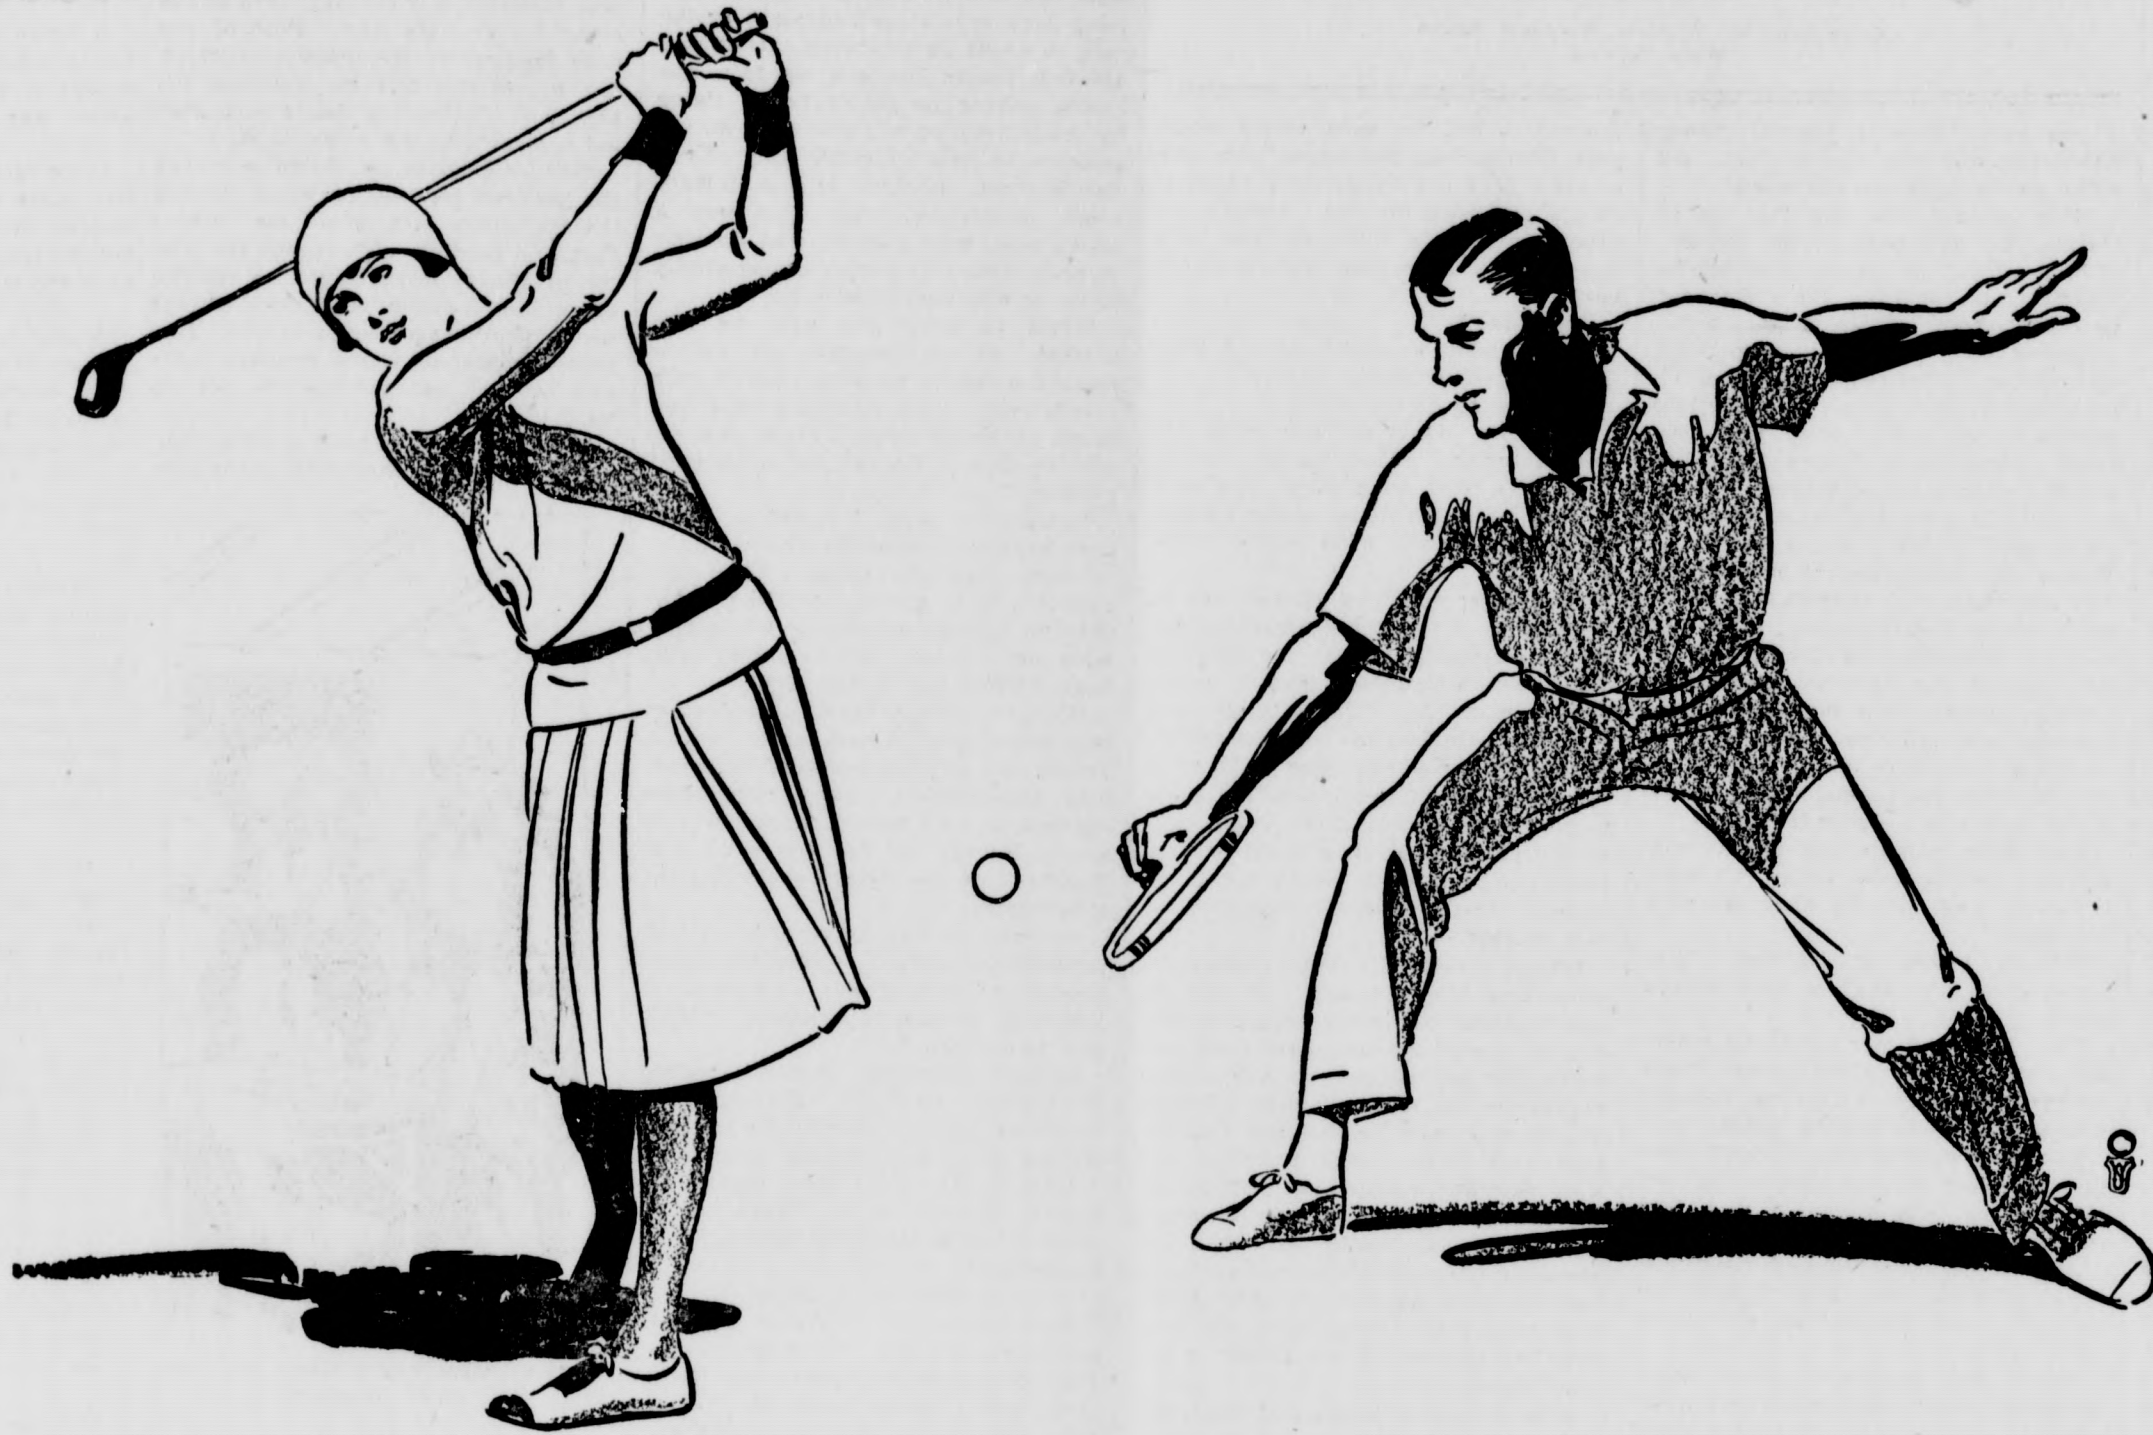

"If it's fool talk maybe he's gauging it to the capacity of yore understanding," Shep. Sounds like fool talk to you. But is it? Those who saw him swarmin' over you last night, when you was hollerin' for some one to take him off, claim he looked like he could whip a stack of bobtailed wildcats."

"Jumped me when I wasn't lookin', I tell you," growled Shep.

"I heard you the first time, Shep. Well, the boys say he was certainly sailin'. I'd admire to see another performance."

"You'll see it. Soon's the bride is off," Sanderson boasted.

READY TO WEAR COSTUMES AT POLLY ANN SMART SHOP

Ready to wear costumes that delight in their quality and make and fit are being disposed of at a remarkable rate at the Smart Shop in the Daly City Theatre building. Satisfied purchasers of dresses whether of the knitted variety, or of filmy material, tell the good news to scores of others and many of the informed ones lose no time in making a visit to "our own" style headquarters. The tedious process of buying garments made to measure is no longer necessary in these modern days. In this third decade of the twentieth century it is altogether de rigueur to get ready to wear suits or coats.

Attire for any occasion—street, formal evening, sports—is obtainable at the Smart Shop and what is of particular importance, the taste of the customer is given the most careful attention.

Self-Control Prominent

Attribute of Socrates
Socrates was a graduate of the school of hard knocks who learned to talk by talking and to preach what he had himself practiced.

His two main tenets were self-control and self-knowledge, and here the stories about him are quite consistent. When he made friends with people of means he could enjoy their luxuries. He outdrank Aristophanes at Agathon's banquet, but generally he preferred not to drink too much lest he might think too little. He believed in temperance, and when made symposiarch, or leader of the feast, he called for "little cups."

Good food he enjoyed, but he could endure the poor cooking of his wife. The same with clothes. During the campaign at Potidea, when others were clad in sheepskins and furs, he walked barefoot on the snow. But unlike many moral reformers Socrates did not insist that what he did was the only thing to do.

If the Greeks had smoked tobacco he would not have belonged to the Anti-Nicotine league. No, his doctrine of self-control seemed to be this: "I can do with, and I can do without, and I trust that you can do the same." Or, as he put the matter when present at the fair: "How many things there are which I do not need."—Woodbridge Riley in "Men and Morals."

Nothing to Distinguish

Murderer From Others
It has been discovered that only two per cent of the murderers in New York in the past fifteen years have been fat men, and that the most ghastly crimes are usually committed there by those who are devoid of vitamins.

One of the most famous murderers in the world, Charles Peace, was described by a counsel who once defended him as "a small, spare man, clean-shaven, with a very prominent chin, which he could so distort as to make himself unrecognizable." The police description of him issued at the time was: "Thin and slightly built, 5ft. 4in. high, grey (nearly white) hair, beard, and whiskers." Crippen was spare of chest, narrow of shoulder, meager in height, and devoid of muscle, with protruding eyeballs which gave his face a meaningless stare. Scotland Yard was asked about the Cassius type, but no encouragement was given to the New York theory. "My experience is," said an official, "that murderers have few characteristics to distinguish them from the ordinary men you meet in the street, train, or omnibus."

Curling Requires Skill

The game of curling is played on a rink marked out on the ice, with large, smooth stones to which handles are fixed. The stones weigh from 30 to 45 pounds. There are usually four players on a side or team. Each player uses two stones, which he slides along the ice toward a mark 42 yards distant. The object is for a player to lay his stones closer to the mark than those of his opponents. After all players have "curled" or played, the side having stones nearest the mark scores a point for each stone so placed. In Canada and the United States iron curlers are sometimes used in place of stones.

Strand of Hemp

A South American woman living in Paris sued a furniture mover for $4,000 alleging that while transferring her household goods he lost a bit of a hangman's noose which she esteems as a bringer of good luck. The superstition is ancient. When Haman was hanged on the gallows he built for Mordecai it is likely that there was rivalry among Ahasuerus' people for a strand of the rope Queen Esther diverted from its original purpose. Gilderoy was hanged on a gallows tree so high that his kite was immortalized in a saying which endures to this day, and the hemp must have been in demand.—New York Sun.

Each in His Own Place

Let us be not soloists, dominating the whole place, but each one a member of an orchestra, content to bring all that we have and contribute it in music, while we ourselves for the moment keep our personality in shadow and subjection, that there may come to this world a greater harmony, a greater symmetry, a more perfect adjustment of conflicting loyalties, so that we may reach the highest ambition of all, which is, that we may have a name at which men and women, when they hear it, will smile gladly and be proud to claim it as the name of the Friend.—Rosslyn Mitchell.

Always Merry and Bright

A certain club had replaced its familiar black-coated servants with young, and sometimes pretty, waitresses. One of the old die-hard members who had strongly opposed the idea dropped in to lunch one day.

"How's the duck today?" he growled, glowering at the girl who came to serve him.

"Oh, I'm all right," said the waitress, perkily. "How are you, sir?"—Brooklyn Eagle.

When

The family was expecting Uncle John for dinner Sunday. During the week father announced that Uncle John could not come because he had dislocated his shoulder.

With quite a worried expression on his face Billy asked: "When does he expect to locate it?"

New York Has Largest

of World's Carillons

The most famous carillon in the world is the St. Rombold's carillon of 45 bells at Malines, in Belgium. The belfry at Bruges has 47 bells, a like number sound from Antwerp's cathedral spire. In the belfry at Mons are 44 bells and from the belfry at Ghent 52 bells still ring even as they did when the treaty of peace between the United States and Great Britain was signed on Christmas eve, 1814. At Amsterdam, the Netherlands, and also at Middleburg, Delft, Utrecht, The Hague, Groningen and at Arnhem, famous carillons are found. Patriotic Americans have placed upon the Louvain (Belgium) library a carillon of 48 bells. In Canada there are five modern carillons, including Simcoe of 23 bells, Guelph of 23 bells, Toronto university of 23 bells, Toronto Metropolitan church of 23 bells and Ottawa of 53 bells, this last carillon being placed in the tower of the Parliament house. In the United States there are approximately 30 carillons. The most important of these are at New York, a carillon of 63 bells, the largest carillon in the world, the gift of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in memory of his mother; at Cohasset, 51 bells; at Mountain Lake, Fla., 60 bells; Chicago, 43 bells; Germantown, Pa., 48 bells; Cranbrook, Mich., 45 bells; Gloucester, Mass., 31 bells; Birmingham, Ala., 25 bells; Detroit, Mich., 28 bells; Princeton university, 35 bells; Andover, Mass., 37 bells; Mercersburg, Pa., 43 bells; Morristown, N. J., 35 bells; Albany, N. Y., 60 bells; Norwood, Mass., 50 bells; Plainfield, N. J., 23 bells; Cincinnati, Ohio, 23 bells; Springfield, Mass., 47 bells; Indianapolis, Ind., 60 bells, and Rochester, Minn., the Mayo clinic, 23 bells.

"Radical," Term Applied to Advanced Liberals

At the mention of the "radical" there is immediately conjured up in the mind thoughts of Communists, Bolsheviks or some other revolutionary group whose ideas run counter to those of law-abiding citizens. That radicalism, however, is not a modern exorcism is known to all who have studied the movement. The original radicals, in the word's present political sense, constituted an English party, active early in the Nineteenth century.

These radicals were really included in the Liberal political group of the day, the radicals being those members with more advanced ideas. Henry Hunt and others who were in favor of radical reforms enjoyed the distinction or obloquy of being the first to be termed "radicals," the name being applied to them in 1818.—Kansas City Star.

An Afterthought

Illustrating his contention that the modern actor is too apt altogether to suppose that he is in some way above the author, H. B. Irving, son of Henry Irving, and himself a fine Hamlet—used to tell, as a great joke against himself, how he had been in the box office of his own theater when a clergyman from the country came in to buy a couple of tickets for a performance of "Hamlet." Having secured his seats the clergyman started to go, but as an afterthought he came back. "By the way," said he, greatly to the amazement of Irving, "Who is playing the part of Hamlet?"—Kansas City Times.

Great Church Organization

The Federal Council of Churches held its first meeting at Philadelphia, 1908, when it was organized. Thirty denominations were united by this act for the purpose of enabling churches to do together what they could not hope to do alone; to express the fellowship and unity of the Christian church; to unite the Christian bodies of America into service for Christ in the world; to encourage devotional fellowship and mutual counsel, and to secure a larger combined interest for the churches of Christ in all matters affecting the moral and social condition of the people and the world at large.

Volcanic Alaskan Valley

The Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes is a volcanic region in Alaska, which came into being at the time of the eruption of Mount Katmai, June 8, 1912. It and its neighboring wonders were discovered by Robert F. Griggs, director of the National Geographic society expedition, from 1915 to 1919. This region proved to be such a stupendous volcanic laboratory, as well as being so rich in scenic value, that in September, 1918, President Wilson set aside the whole district, comprising more than 1,000,000 acres, as the Katmai National monument.

Too Much

Mutt, as the family dog is very appropriately named, thoroughly enjoys automobile riding, and he was expressing his joy the other day by leaping gayly from the back seat to the front and treading with heavy paws upon every one in transit. Sunny, his little master, became surfeited with this procedure, and exclaimed in exasperation, "Look here, Mutt, I don't like so much dogness!"

Grandfather Vindicated

Banjo clocks, just like our grandfathers used to wind, are among the latest favorites in furniture despite the hundreds of types of modern clocks on the market.—Country House.

Lorene Squire, a Kansas school girl, earns her way by selling pictures of birds and animals taken with her camera.

After years of experimenting a white tomato has been produced which is non-acidic.

UTILITIES GIVE AID

Whatever one may think of public utility methods generally, it can not be denied that during the depression of recent months the utilities have done much toward preventing a worse unemployment situation than has been experienced.

The Business Week, a leading business periodical, declares that "more than railroads or any other major group, utilities have proven themselves the real stabilizing factor in a bad year." Noting that a billion dollars of new capital has gone into utility expansion this year, it adds that "these great sums, spent in many ways and places, have helped to steady business."

It is well for the country that, in spite of all the demagogic attacks made on them of late, the utilities have maintained their courage and faith in America, and have been willing to back that faith by going forward at a time when more timid enterprises stood still or did a back-step.

NEW VIENNESE OPERETTE COMING TO CURRAN THEATRE

"Paris in Spring," the sparkling new Viennese operette, which Lillian Aubertson and Louis O. Macloon will present for its American premier at the Curran Theatre, San Francisco, Monday night, November 3, with a brilliant cast and large chorus, is at present the reigning hit of Berlin and Vienna, where it has been playing for many months. The tuneful score of this gay musical comedy, written by Emmerich Kalman, is proving a sensation in all the capitals of Europe, where its songs are being sung and danced everywhere.

Allan Prior, last seen here in the title role of "The Student Prince," is seen in the leading male role of "Paris in Spring." Prior is considered the finest tenor on the American stage today and has appeared in New York and London in "The Student Prince," "Rainbow," "White Eagle," and in the talking picture "Bride of the Regiment."

Opposite him will be Lilli Sebrana, noted Cuban soprano and opera star. Others in the cast are Max Dill, of the famous team of Kolb and Dill, Janice Joyce, Richard Powell, Russell Scott and many others, including the Hungarian violinist Karekarto, and a singing ensemble of forty. The augmented orchestra (largest to every play for an operetta in the Curran) is under the direction of Leo Flanders. Beautiful costumes by Howard Greer and lavish settings enhance this colorful and tuneful production, which is being directed and supervised by Lillian Aubertson, who has given the West "The Desert Song," "The New Moon," "Hit the Deck," "No, No, Nanette," and "The Student Prince."

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause." But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or even increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c today at the nearest Rexall Drug Store. Edwards' Drug Store, Mission street, near San Jose avenue. —Adv.

The OBJECT of the Electric Railway Tax Equalization Amendment (Number Four on the ballot) is to reclassify for taxation purposes the electric railways of California as distinct from the steam railroads and to place the taxes of the electric railways on an equality with taxes paid on common property and by the motor bus and stage companies. It is:

BASED on the California Tax Commission's findings that the electric railways "bear a disproportionately large tax burden."

APPROVED unanimously by the Senate Committee on Revenue and Taxation and the Assembly Committee on Constitutional Amendments.

RACING OF HELP TO THE JOBLESS

The following editorial appeared in the San Francisco "Home Stretch" on October 22:

Memories of Old Spain come back strong every time we take a jaunt down to Tanforan. Fans are counting the days right now when the opportunity will be here once more for those trips to San Francisco's race course. The fall meeting of the Pacific Coast Breeders' Association opens in the middle of November, to be on until the middle of December.

Tanforan is a name quite in harmony with the traditions of this San Francisco Bay region, having its origin in the period when the explorers and fathers of the church were occupied in bringing civilization to the coast along the Pacific. Toribio Tanforan was a member of an aristocratic family so strong in the councils of the king that it was given a grant to an immense tract on the peninsula side of the bay just as Luis Peralta was granted title to a veritable king's realm on the Continental side.

When Prince Poniatowski, with the financial support of the Crockers and other men of affairs of San Francisco, determined back in the nineties to build a race track plant down the peninsula, he brushed up a bit in the history of the property and properly enough decided on the name of Tanforan.

Those were glorious days for the sport. Times changed, however, and on at least one occasion the tract of two hundred acres narrowly escaped being cut into building lots or transformed into something that is surely a far cry from the grandeur of racing—a truck garden.

The atmosphere is at Tanforan, but this is a practical world and we must think of making a living as well as living, and going to the races is certainly the most stirring kind of life to be found. The coming of the races gives employment to scores of mechanics, and just now that is of extreme importance. Perhaps the only solution of the vexing problem of overcoming the turmoil at present world wide is putting willing hands to work that have been trained to do.

In the preparation of Tanforan for the sport to open next month thousands of dollars are being expended in the construction of new stalls for the thoroughbreds, "tack" rooms, remodeling of the grand stand, burnishing up of the Queen Anne club house, and many other necessary motions that probably could be classed as repairs.

Carpenters, painters, electricians, plumbers, roofers, unskilled laborers and others are employed in the work. Nearly all of the employees are men of family, and the wages earned at Tanforan go for food, clothing, amusement, and in other expenditures that keep a community buoyant in every way.

Only a few weeks ago another army of workers prepared the race course at Del Monte for a short period of racing. The people of Monterey county put on a fair and the feature of the show was thoroughbred racing out on the historic mile oval at the Hotel Del Monte. To accommodate the throngs expected at the track—which expectation was realized—a commodious grand stand had to be erected and other improvements made at big expense. Labor benefitted immeasurably.

Sport engenders the best of feeling in men and as was said long ago by a noble over in England—"every one is equal on the turf and under it."

YOUNG AND ROLPH AGREE

When Governor C. C. Young and Mayor James Rolph, the Republican nominee for Governor, join in endorsing a ballot proposal, it is a compliment to the proposition in question, but more than that—it is interesting news.

One of the most pleasing aftermaths of the primary election has been the sportsmanlike attitude of Governor Young toward the man who defeated him for re-election, and the gracious response of Mayor Rolph. Both men have conducted themselves, in this regard, as California desires her Governors to conduct themselves. Governor Young and Mayor Rolph are again in accord, this time in support of Proposition No. 5 on the November ballot, known as the State Employees' Retirement Act.

Governor Young declares: "It is probably the soundest and fairest retirement measure ever devised."

And Mayor Rolph asserts: "I am glad to recommend Number 5 as a constructive measure which will pay the state real dividends in increased efficiency and lowered overhead."

Governor Young knows the proposed retirement program from its inception, having named the commission which recommended that a retirement system be adopted. He believes it to be actuarially sound.

Mayor Rolph knows the value of Number 5 because he fathered a similar system for the city employees of San Francisco and has seen it result in improved service and a finer personnel in his home city.

California voters will do well to vote "Yes" on Number 5. It is humanitarian and forward-looking.—Stockton Record.

Bert Slagle and Slim Franks, rival candidates for sheriff of Macon county, North Carolina, campaigned to a draw at a certain farm house one day recently. Slagle chopped some wood while Franks did the family churning. The housewife said later: "I hardly know who to vote for; both were so nice."

—and set some fellow up in the business of selling the public the Daylight Saving idea. The $50,000 came from some oil firms and stock brokers...who in turn got it from John W. Public. The plan was to tell everybody a lot of nice things that may be true but apparently aren't since a good portion of the country doesn't believe what they say. In fact, 97% think so little of the idea that they are getting along without it. For the benefit of any late tilters-in, let's take a good look at Daylight Saving and see what its results are. In the first place, that extra hour is a myth. You can't make a 25 hour day. What you'll have to do is bounce out of the feather bed an hour earlier. POLLY ANN SMART SHOP SOLVES DRESS PROBLEM

Harmony in attire must be achieved if one would like to be well dressed. It goes without saying some such thing is the ambition of every member of the fair sex. Expert advice comes in handy when purchasing gowns and hats, and lately it has become the custom of the mothers, daughters and sisters of Daly City to go to the Polly Ann Smart Shop for the working out of their problems.

Since the opening of the "mode" headquarters in the Daly City Theatre building it has been seen with much gratification by our eyes—male, to be sure—that a steady stream of buyers flows toward the Smart Shop.

Knitted goods are all the rage just now, as there is a bit of nip in the air, especially toward nightfall, and as for "chapeaux," they are, for the most part, sketched in a model of French felt with medium brim, and are of chic cut.

Little Robert Mullen, formerly of Daly City, now residing in Menlo Park, has returned to his home from the Community hospital, and is much improved in health.

Mrs. Elizabeth Wettstein, of Brunswick street, who has been ill for the past month, is up and around again, and her many friends wish her a speedy recovery.

The Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church entertained a large crowd at a dinner at the church yesterday. A splendid meal was provided, being served under most satisfying conditions, the general expression of those present being that these dinners can not be given too often.

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 4 FRIDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1930 NUMBER 14

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

A Conscientious Jury
Judge (after charging jury): "Is there any question that any one would like to ask before considering the evidence?"

Juror: "A couple of us would like to know if the defendant boiled the malt one or two hours, and how does he keep the yeast out."

Real Encouragement
Aspiring youth (to prospective employer): "You'll pay me what I'm worth?"

Manager: "I'll do better than that. I'll give you a small salary to start with."

Sure Enough
An Emporia man's car struck the rear of a car driven by a woman.
"Didn't you see me stick out my hand?" the woman asked.
"No, I didn't miss," he replied.
"Well, if it'd been my leg, you'd have seen it," she replied, and drove away.

Human
"Why so depressed old man?"
"The awful cost of living; constant bills for materials, paint and shingles."
"What, your house, I suppose."
"No, my daughters."

Kindling and Block Wood.
A person uses sixty-three muscles to frown and thirteen to smile. Why not be efficient?

If we were the undertaker, everybody would be either our customer or our prospect. We should all have such relations now, for the home of today is surely as important as the grave will be tomorrow. Let us enjoy life in a better and better home while we can.

Aberdeen and American Block Coal.

Demoted
"My advice to you," said the baseball manager to the rookie he had been giving a try-out, "is to join one of the Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea."
